

Professional Biography for Steve Harryman

Steve Harryman is an award-winning filmmaker, videographer, photographer, writer, graphic designer and K-12 art education advocate. Steve's cinematic work has appeared in the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie "Away & Back" and his first art-based film "The Last Lesson" was awarded top honors in the 37th Annual Telly Awards.

It was in making "The Last Lesson" that Steve rediscovered his once-lost love for art and the important role art educators play in the lives of their students. As a result, Steve is now focused on promoting K-12 art education through film and video, working with MAEA art educators across Michigan in K-12 public schools including Northview, Byron Center, Jenison, Birch Run, White Pine, Fennville, Portage and Pentwater.
