

As a native Michigander who has worked at KCAD for over 12 years, Nicole DeKraker collaborates with students, faculty, staff, alumni and community partners to create social, educational and professional opportunities for the college's student body. Nicole and her spouse, Adam, a professor in KCAD's Photography program, are dedicated champions of the power and educational value of the arts. Through her work with the national Scholastic Art & Writing Awards competition, Nicole helps nurture creativity in future generations and builds bridges with art educators at the local and national levels. She holds a BA in photography with a minor in art history from Indiana University-Bloomington, as well as an MBA with an advanced certificate in design and innovation management from Ferris State University.
